Karen,

Your YouTube tutorial for making weltcord is wonderful! It was so easy! I've always avoided adding weltcord to the items that I make because it was so tedious to cut out all the strips and then sew them together. Your method makes it a breeze. With one half yard of fabric I was able to make more than enough cording to make name pillows for my grandson's bedrooms. I could have skipped the cording but I think it adds so much to the finished product. I'm attaching a couple of pictures. Thank you again for your tutorial--I couldn't have done this without it. Now I'm going to add cording to just about everything I make!

Hello Karen,

I was a member of your class at the Novi Expo center in Michigan this past fall and afterwards left with the goal of slipcovering my couch. Your teaching skills plus the video has given me the confidence to tackle my first project in my home.

I had such a great time yesterday in Worcester Ma...the class was fabulous. It is so much fun to be with people who have the same passion for everything fabric!

I would like to order your videos...all of them!! I love the professional look with this technique, and already have several pieces I would love to cover...now just finding the time...guess the house won't get clean this weekend!

Thanks for a great day!

My sister and I met you at the Kansas City, Missouri Sewing Expo. I have your videos and have tried some of your techniques and they have really sped up my slipcover making. Thanks for making them available.

Karen,

Enjoyed the seminar Saturday. Here are the photo's you asked for. Looking forward to trying out some of the techniques I learned.

LOVE your slipcover video. So, when will you have another video for part 2, i.e. making cushion covers and installing zips?

Also, FYI--I attended your two classes at the expo center in Chantilly, Virginia this past fall. Since then, I have made 9 slipcovers for customers and changed my business cards from "Custom Draperies" to read "Custom Draperies and Slipcovers". I really enjoy the variety of doing both window treatments and slipcovers. Thank you for sharing your knowledge. You are a good teacher.

I took your workshop in St .Petersburg Florida in September 2001. I have finally completed the cushions for my wooden furniture. Thank you for the instruction and the added confidence. I'm ready to make a full set of covers now.

Karen,

It was great to read about the article that your slipcovers were in the Mary Engelbreit's Home Companion Magazine for Dec/Jan 2001. Slipcovers have been going great for me. I love making them and am keeping pretty busy through a designer.

I just wanted you to know how much I enjoyed your class on Saturday (August 18, 2001). I learned soooo much, and am so excited to do my first slipcovers.

I just wanted you to know that I'm getting ready to rent some workspace. It is because of you that I have the training and courage to do this. You are a wonderful teacher and mentor.

Once again your video and the photos I took in your 4 day slipcover class at the Professional Drapery School really helped. I forgot how to stitch in the ditch. Your method makes a wonderful side arm.

I took your slipcover class the last time your came to the Vogue Fabric in Evanston. It was the 2nd time I had taken it. Well, I finally made a slipcover and it turned out beautifully. It was a wing chair with some tricky spots that were a little different for the chair you did in class. The couch is my next project.

Thank you, thank you, thank you!!! It was great to finally meet you. I learned more than I thought possible from the workshop. Your technique is so simple that even I might be able to figure it out. I will be attempting to make one starting this weekend, so I am sure to be in touch with you as soon as I run into problems. Of course I have this wonderful video to watch as I'm working, so hopefully that will pull me through the tough spots.

Your slipcover cushion class in Evanston on October 3, 2001 was excellent. I would never attempt a slipcover without your class and your video. About your video ...after completing one slipcover project with your method, I have several more projects planned for the future. Your slipcover video is invaluable--a refresher course before each project. The video is clear, concise and includes many professional tips. Thank you!
